COUNTY BOARD.

Ancient Order of Hibernians Held a Splendid Business Meeting.

Treasurer's Report Shows the Irish Field Day Was a Success.

Arrangements Under Way for the State Convention and Ladies' Auxiliary.

MAY REPEAT THE BALL GAME

The regular meeting of the County Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians was held in Hibernian Hall, Seventh and Market streets, last Saturday night. County President Thomas Keenan was in the chair and every one of the local divisions was represented. Treasurer George Butler read his report of the receipts and expenditures on account of the Irish field day. The report showed that a handsome sum had been realized. It was decided to send letters of appreciation to all the donors of prizes in the field day contests.

Secretary W. T. Meehan was instructed to send a letter of condolence to Barney Coll, of Jeffersonville, ex-State Treasurer of the Indiana Ancient Order of Hibernians, who recently suffered the loss of his estimable wife.

The County Board decided to keep a record from year to year of the prize winners, time, etc., in the various athletic contests.

Reports made by delegates from the various divisions show that the interest in the A. O. H. ball game, which took place on Irish field day, is still unabated. On this occasion the Portland team defeated the Limerick nine by the score of 12 to 11. The Limerick boys believe they were defeated by accident and are anxious for another go. After a general discussion the matter was turned over to Division Presidents Heeney and Mackey and Captains John Grogan and Hugh Higgins. These gentlemen are now considering the advisability of arranging another game between the young men of Divisions 3 and 4, to be played at Eclipse Park during the latter part of September. None but members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians will be allowed to play on either team. If the game is pulled off the proceeds will be donated to fitting up a gymnasium for members of the order.

It was announced that a distinguished speaker would deliver a lecture to the A. O. H. on the evening of September 29. All local Hibernians will be invited to attend.

The County Board also took up the matter of preparing for the State convention, which will be held in this city on Sunday, September 14. The following Committee on Arrangements was appointed: Newton G. Rogers, Mike Tynan, John J. Hennessy, George J. Butler and Owen Keiran.

President Dolan, of Division 1, made a brief address in favor of the organization of a Ladies' Auxiliary. The board decided to call a meeting of the wives, sisters and sweethearts of members of the A. O. H. to be held at Hibernian Hall on the afternoon of Sunday, September 28, at which time the Ladies' Auxiliary will be organized.

The first fall initiation of the A. O. H. will be held by Division 4 on Wednesday evening, September 10.

GRAND BANQUET

Attended the Passing of the Leo Dramatic Association.

The members of the Leo Dramatic Society met at St. Mary's Hall, Eighth and Grayson streets, last Wednesday evening and dissolved the society, the work for which it had been organized having been accomplished.

The Leo Dramatic Society was organized in 1897 for the purpose of paying off the debt of St. Mary's school building. From time to time the society lent its aid to other charitable causes. Now that the work for which it was organized has been accomplished, the society has passed away.

On the occasion of its passing the members were tendered a banquet in the school hall. Coleman Weiss was the toastmaster. Of course Very Rev. Father Westermann was the center of attraction and made an address, thanking the members of the society for what they had done. Other speakers were Rev. Father Helling, Henry W. Newman, August C. Reverman, Emmet B. Kennedy, Ben Middendorf, James J. Barry, Dr. Ed Huhnhuch and Coleman Weiss.

CULTIVATE PERSEVERANCE.

After you have learned a thing stick to it. The work that affords the least difficulties is the one that has been mastered the best, and not the one that may appear more attractive. There is a great deal of truth in that old saying: "A rolling stone gathers no moss." The fault often lies in ourselves and not in the work. Where there is the disposition to learn properly and then apply the knowledge well there will always be a happy amount of satisfaction and contentment. A false sense of pride is what impedes the progress of many young women who look on certain lines of work, in which they would be successful, as too inferior for them. Golden opportunities are rare and the wise young woman accepts the ones that come within her reach. This false sense of pride is the cause of many aimless lives that are easily dissatisfied. And work that is well done is honorable. This is a fact that the ambitious girl will not despise.

LABOR DAY

Was Appropriately Celebrated by Local Labor Unions.

Labor day, the national holiday of the workmen, was appropriately celebrated in Louisville. In accordance with the mandates of Congress, the proclamation of Gov. Beckham and Acting Mayor Weissinger, the banks and many of the business houses were closed all day. Early in the morning it rained. Later there was more rain, but that did not keep the people from coming out to see the parade, nor did it keep the members of labor unions from joining in the parade when the time came, at 2:30 o'clock. At that time the sun shone, but the streets were muddy; nevertheless between 10,000 and 12,000 union men fell into line and marched through the principal streets to Phoenix Hill Park, where the picnic was held.

Acting Mayor Weissinger occupied a carriage in the parade. At the picnic grounds speeches were made by J. A. Parker and Joseph D. Bradburn. The picnic lasted till long after midnight and was a financial success. Too much credit for the celebration can not be given to James W. Dougherty, who was Chairman of the Labor Day Committee; John Fuchs, the grand marshal, and George Goetz, President of the Stonecutters' Union. All of these gentlemen worked hard for the labor celebration.

As a result of his good work Jim Dougherty will doubtless be sent to represent Typographical Union, No. 10, at the next meeting of the State Federation of Labor.

RUMORS THICK.

Will Matt Winn be an Official of the New Jockey Club.

Matt Winn, the well known Fourth avenue tailor, is back after a trip to New York, wherein business and pleasure were combined. Rumor has it that Mr. Winn will be one of the prominent officials when the Louisville Jockey Club is reorganized. Some have it that he will be Secretary, others that he will be Vice President. Mr. Winn smiles and says nothing.

There is nothing too good for Matt Winn, and no matter what position he may be given, he will be a credit to the Jockey Club—that is if he wants a place with it.

PEOPLE YOU KNOW.

Everybody in Louisville that is anybody knows Pat Fingean. First of all, Fingean is a good fellow; then he is a fine mechanic—there is none better in Louisville—and he is first, last and all the time an Irish-American. Pat, you know, was a turnkey at the county jail for awhile, but politics didn't suit Pat. Pat had an unpleasant way of telling the truth at all times, and the politicians didn't like it, but Pat did not care. He went back to the Louisville & Nashville shops and began to work where truth was appreciated. But Fingean has one failing; if it can be called a failing. He won't get up in the morning when he is called. He waits for the first whistle, which blows at 6:40. Then he bounds out of bed, makes his morning ablution, jumps into his clothes, eats his breakfast, reads the paper, smokes his pipe, and then gets to the round-house before the second whistle blows, at 6:50 o'clock. If you don't believe this, ask his brother Mike.

ANXIETY TO PLEASE.

People don't like to be contradicted, but nobody who is worth anything likes to be met with perpetual acquiescence. Some well meaning girls in their anxiety to please hasten to approve every word that falls from one's lips. The sooner they learn the gentle art of disagreeing the better. The person who agrees with everything that is said must be shallow, and shallowness is very tiresome. Well-raised doubts are essential to intelligent conversation. Amicable disagreement is the safest basis for friendship, because people who understand it can not quarrel. Courtesy lies behind it. Beyond that, unselfishness. It is curious how the spade always turns up unselfishness when digging for the root of our virtues.

CAUSE FOR CONGRATULATION.

The members of Mackin Council are congratulating themselves upon the fact that in three years they have paid off $3,500 of the debt on the home for the council at Twenty-sixth and Stevin streets. In less than two years the debt will be entirely wiped out.

The Most Rev. Archbishop Ryan will preach the jubilee sermon at the fifth anniversary celebration of St. John's Cathedral, Cleveland, next November.

VERY IMPORTANT

Will Be the State Convention of the Catholic Knights of America.

State President Will Doubtless Be Elected One of the Supreme Delegates.

A Few Words About the Present State Officers in Kentucky.

DELEGATES WILL MEET TUESDAY

A large and enthusiastic delegation will go from Louisville to Frankfort to attend the State convention of the Catholic Knights of America, which opens there next Tuesday. The meeting will be an important one and a full attendance of the delegates is expected. The present State officers of the Catholic Knights of America are:

Spiritual Director—Rev. L. Bax. State President—Michael Reichert. State Vice President—E. T. Houlihan. State Secretary—John J. Score. State Treasurer—Sylvester Rapier. Supreme Trustee—W. C. Smith. State Delegates to the last Supreme convention—Harry A. Veeneman and Joseph P. McGinn, both of Louisville.

Very Rev. Father Bax, the State Spiritual Director, is known and loved all over Kentucky. He has labored as a priest in this State nearly fifty years and forty-five years of the time was spent at St. John's church in this city. He has been an ardent worker in behalf of the Catholic Knights of America almost since the inception of that society. State President Reichert is the master painter at the Kentucky Wagon Works in this city. He has long been a hard worker in the ranks of the Catholic Knights and has served his brethren faithfully as State President during his terms. It looks now as if he were to be promoted by being made one of the delegates to the Supreme convention, which meets in St. Louis in May, 1903. State Vice President Houlihan is the leading grocer at Lexington, and has for years been an ardent worker in the ranks of the Catholic Knights of America. John J. Score, the State Secretary, is a valued employee of the mechanical department of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company. He has been time after time re-elected Secretary of Branch 4 and has always proven a careful, capable and thoroughly reliable official. He will be re-elected State Secretary this year by acclamation. Sylvester Rapier, the State Treasurer, is the leading banker at New Haven and has long been noted for his fidelity to the Catholic Knights. He will also be re-elected unless all signs fail. Harry A. Veeneman, who was one of the State delegates to the last Supreme convention, will not be a candidate this year, but has stepped aside in favor of Mr. Reichert. Mr. Veeneman holds a responsible position with Levy Bros. J. P. McGinn will undoubtedly succeed himself as Supreme delegate. He holds a clerkship with the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company.

The Louisville delegates will leave Louisville for Frankfort via the L. & N. at 4 o'clock p. m., Monday, September 8. The train will leave from the depot at First and Water streets. The headquarters of the delegates will be at the Capital Hotel. The convention will be held in the same building.

A complete list of the delegates is as follows:

Branch 4—W. C. Smith. Branch 5—Edward Neuhaus. Branch 6—Charles Falk and Frank Speckert. Branch 14—Louisa Fackler. Branch 15—L. A. M. Grief. Branch 16—M. J. Hanley. Branch 18—John Murphy. Branch 21—Patrick Holley. Branch 24—Thomas P. Dignan. Branch 25—Albert F. Martin or Will T. Meehan.

Branch 27—Murty Shea. Branch 29—Edward Dowling. Branch 31—W. T. Spaulding. Branch 32—Charles Huhnbuch. Branch 36—Joseph Huhnbuch, Sr. Branch 39—J. A. Shrader. Branch 44—Louisa Goedde. Branch 45—Henry Feltholter. Branch 47—Thomas Noe. Branch 49—John A. Funk. Branch 61—James E. Rapier. Branch 83—R. Power. Branch 101—W. M. Spalding. Branch 127—R. L. Roberts. Branch 129—Dr. J. A. Branch 716—Joseph Wisghaus. Branch 903—W. T. Barker.

TRINITY COUNCIL EUCHE.

Trinity Council, Y. M. I., assisted by the Young Ladies' Auxiliary, has arranged to give an open air encense and dance at Phoenix Hill Park on September 17. In case of rain the encense will be held in the hall. A great many handsome prizes will be distributed.

ABLE REPORT

Of the National Federation of Catholic Societies Read.

Dr. J. W. Fowler Gave a Comprehensive Statement of the Meeting.

Louisville Delegates Were Appointed on the Important Committees.

A BLESSING FROM HOLY FATHER

The Jefferson County Federation of Catholic Societies held its regular meeting at Satolli Hall last Thursday night. The most important business of the evening was the reading of the report of Dr. J. W. Fowler, President of the County Federation, as delegate to the American Federation of Catholic Societies.

Dr. Fowler presided over the meeting, which was well attended. His report was read by Eugene J. Cooney, Secretary of the County Federation.

Dr. Fowler's report detailed every incident of the convention. A great deal of the information has come to us heretofore through the daily papers in a general way, but Dr. Fowler's report was official and gave much information that the daily press did not have.

He told in brief of the election of himself and Mr. Cooney as delegates from the Jefferson County Federation to the National Federation, and how they were welcomed by other delegates.

Dr. Fowler then told how the convention met in Chicago August 15. The delegates attended pontifical mass in the Holy Name Cathedral. The sermon was preached by the Right Rev. Bishop Messmer, of Green Bay, Wis. After mass the National Federation convened at Association Hall. The delegates were welcomed by Mayor Harrison. T. B. Minahan, of Columbus, O., President of the Federation, responded to the address of welcome. The body then went into executive session.

One of the most important matters discussed was the Philippine question. An able address on the subject of the friars in the Philippines was delivered by the Rev. Father O'Reilly, a member of the Augustinian order of friars. In brief, Father O'Reilly advocated a free discussion of the Philippine question in the United States. His address was well received and the federation adopted a resolution showing that the sentiment of the delegates was that the Philippine question was not understood in the United States, and advised the formal presentation of a memorial on the subject to the United States Government.

Rev. Father Gans, who has charge of the Catholic children attending the Indian school at Carlisle, Pa., addressed the federation on the Indian school question. He was present as a representative of Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia. Father Gans gave a graphic description of the Indians from the time of the discovery of America until now a mere handful were left at the present day. He told how they had been driven from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean; how an Indian was the one member of the human family that had never bowed the knee to any but God, the Great Spirit. He recounted what the late President Grant had done for the benefit and education of the Indians and how little was being done by the Government now, and showed how Mother Drexel, a Catholic nun, was spending $100,000 annually from her own purse for the education of the Indians.

Father Gans was well received and the federation later adopted a resolution of sympathy with the Indians and pledged the moral support of all Catholics to the Indian Government schools.

During the first day's session of the convention Pope Leo XIII. sent his blessing to the federation. It was received with many wishes for his continued good health.

Dr. Fowler's report also showed how the Louisville delegates were well placed on committees—Dr. Fowler was made a member of the committee on constitution; Eugene J. Cooney was appointed on two committees—resolutions and finance; William T. Meehan on two committees—press and nominations. To crown it all, Dr. Fowler was made a member of the Board of Directors or Executive Board, the controlling body of the federation.

Dr. Fowler invited the delegates to meet in Louisville in 1903, and the majority of the delegates favored him, but Bishop McFaul, of Newark, made a personal appeal to have it held in the East.

Dr. Fowler withdrew Louisville and nominated Atlantic City, and the federation so decided and so the convention will meet there on the third Tuesday in July, next year.

The federation now takes in societies of German, French, Bohemian, Polish and other Catholics who previously stood aloof. The constitution was modified to suit their several wishes, so that now the National Federation is national indeed.

Dr. Fowler's able report was well received. A number of new delegates presented credentials and were seated. The suggestion made some time ago that the federation select a fifth week night for meetings, thus avoiding conflict with affiliated societies, will doubtless be adopted soon. The Treasurer's report, showing the condition of the finances and amounts due from members, was received.

The federation made provisions for the appointment of an Executive Board for Jefferson county.

Newton G. Rogers submitted a report on constitution and by-laws which was adopted. The meeting adjourned until the first Thursday in October.

CATHOLIC LAYMEN

Are Getting Things in Shape For the Bishop's Jubilee.

The arrangements for the celebration of the golden jubilee of the Right Rev. Bishop McCloskey are progressing favorably. The clergy and the laymen are meeting from time to time, each body meeting separately, but both acting in unison. Up to date the following programme for the celebration has been agreed upon:

Sunday, October 5—Pontifical high mass at the Cathedral.

Monday, October 6—Mass at the Cathedral for the children.

Tuesday, October 7—The Bishop will be tendered a banquet and reception by the clergy of the diocese.

The clergymen met at St. Francis' Hall Monday and heard reports from the committees. All reported favorable progress. The committees of laymen met at St. Francis' Hall Thursday night, with Michael J. Duffy presiding. The roll-call showed thirty-five congregations represented, and that the representation of each congregation had been increased from two to five members. Mr. Edward J. Hill, Chairman of the committee on arrangements of celebrating, read his committee's report. The committee recommended that the pastors of the various congregations be asked to ring the church bells for at least fifteen minutes beginning at 7 o'clock on the evening of Saturday, October 4; that pastors be asked to celebrate a high mass in honor of the Right Rev. Bishop at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, October 5; that the men of the different congregations assemble on Sunday afternoon, October 5, at a given point and, headed by the Knights of St. John, parade past a reviewing stand to receive the Bishop's blessing; that committees on finance, press, general arrangements, printing and badges and music be appointed. The report of the committee was adopted after a full and free discussion.

President Duffy announced his chairman of committees as follows:

Finance—Frank Geher.

Press—J. J. Caffrey.

Music—John Silberg.

General Arrangements—Edward J. O'Brien.

Printing and Badges—Edward J. Hill. Each Chairman was instructed to select his colleagues in the various committees. The meeting adjourned to meet next week.

NEW IMPETUS

Given the Irish-American Society by Its Recent Departures.

The Irish-American Society held a large and enthusiastic meeting at Hibernian Hall last Thursday night. President John J. Flynn was in the chair. Nine applications for membership were received. Short talks were made by President Flynn, Pat Connaught, Tom Keenan, Joe Nevin, Dennis Heffernan and Thomas P. Walsh. Mr. Walsh gave an interesting account of his recent visit to the Catholic University at Washington, D. C.

The new Committee on Obligation is made up of President Flynn, Thomas Keenan and Thomas P. Walsh.

Since the adoption of the new constitution the Irish-American Society is on the boom. It is not in conflict with any benevolent or insurance society, but is now pledged to the social and political benefit of Irish-Americans in Louisville. The next initiation will take place in November.

CORNER STONE

Of St. John's Church at Carrollton Will Draw a Crowd.

All the local Y. M. I. Councils are arranging to go to Carrollton, Ky., to assist in the laying of the corner stone of St. John's new church at that place. Rev. Father Ignatius M. Ahmann, pastor of the church, is Grand Chaplain of the Y. M. I. in Kentucky, and his Louisville friends want to make the laying of the corner stone a success. The corner stone of the present church at Carrollton was laid by Right Rev. Bishop M. J. Spalding, of Louisville, afterwards Archbishop of Baltimore, many years ago.

Covington and Cincinnati will also send delegations to Carrollton to assist in the ceremonies.

WON THE COW.

Miss Alice Cunningham held the lucky ticket that won the cow disposed of at the Springbank Club lawn fete.

SILVER JUBILEE

Of Father Paul Alf Will Be Appropriately Celebrated This Month.

Members of St. Boniface Parish Will Handsomely Remember Him.

Venerable Parents of the Priest Will Be Among the Visitors.

ELABORATE PROGRAMME ARRANGED

The Very Rev. Father Paul Alf, O. F. M., will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination on Sunday, September 21, and as a consequence every man, woman and child of St. Boniface congregation, of which he is pastor, is at work to make the celebration a success. During the past five years Father Paul, as he is popularly known, has been pastor of St. Boniface church, on Green street, near Jackson. He has a large congregation, one of the largest in the city, and his labors are unremitting in behalf of his flock. The celebration of his silver jubilee will begin at the late mass, 10 o'clock, on the morning of September 21. The mass will be solemn high. The sermon will be preached by the Very Rev. Father Raphael Heese, O. F. M. An augmented choir, under the direction of Prof. Oscar Kleinmeyer, will render appropriate music. The choir will be assisted by Prof. Eichhorn's orchestra.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock solemn vespers will be sung and in the evening at 7:30 o'clock Father Paul will be tendered a reception by the various societies and confraternities of his congregation in the parish hall. The ladies of the congregation are arranging to give a dinner to Father Paul and the visiting clergymen at noon September 21. The various other societies will give him handsome presents. Addresses will be delivered by prominent members of the congregation. One of the main features of interest attending the celebration will be the presence of the venerable father and mother of Father Paul Alf, who will come here from their home in Hamilton, Ohio, to attend his jubilee.

Father Paul Alf was born in Hamilton, Ohio, fifty years ago. Early in life he decided to become a priest, and at the age of seventeen entered the novitiate of that branch of the Franciscans known as the Order of Friars Minor. He was educated in their various seminaries and was ordained at Cincinnati on September 21, 1877. In 1889 he was located in Louisville one year. He was then sent to Chatham, Canada, where he remained ten years. After that he was sent to various parts of the United States and Canada, until he was sent to Louisville, five years ago, as pastor of that great German-American congregation who worship at St. Boniface church.

BIG CELEBRATION

In Honor of Ninth Anniversary of Mackin Council.

Mackin Council, Y. M. I., had a well attended meeting last Tuesday night. A dozen applications for membership were received. Reports from the various committees showed that satisfactory arrangements were in progress for the celebration of the ninth anniversary of the founding of the council, which event will take place Tuesday evening. On this occasion twenty-five new members will be initiated. Addresses will be made by Supreme Delegate John Barry, of New Haven; Grand President Perry and Deputy Grand President William McNally, Grand Secretary George Lautz and others. Invitations have been sent to other local councils and to the New Albany council to attend.

APPRECIATED.

Rev. Louis G. Deppen, in the Record, of which he is the able editor, under date of August 28 has the following good words to say for the Kentucky Irish American:

"In recent years and in Louisville another excellent weekly has been added to Catholic journalism in Kentucky. It is a paper devoted to the moral and social advancement of Irish-Americans in general and to their local religious and social interests in particular. Its editor and publisher is Mr. William M. Higgins, a prominent and esteemed citizen of Louisville. It is now in its ninth volume, and is, we are gratified to hear, meeting with the success it so justly deserves. It is a well made up and a well printed publication ordinarily of twenty-eight large folio columns, occasionally increased to fifty-six."

Such an approval from such a very worthy source is indeed something to be grateful for. The Kentucky Irish American has had a struggle from its birth till the present time. Newspapers are like children—they have many ills and ailments before they reach sturdy maturity—but it can not be said of them that "the good die young." Many good newspapers do die young, but the great majority of newspapers live to a happy old age.

Rev. Father Deppen in giving the foregoing approval of the Kentucky Irish American spoke not of this paper alone. He was giving an outline of the history of Catholic journalism in Kentucky. But the editor feels proud, indeed, to be classed among the Catholic journalists of the State. It is an honor unexpected but certainly most welcome.

The Record and the Kentucky Irish American are not rivals in any sense of the word. The Record is published to give the news of the diocese of Louisville to Catholics, and whatever money is received from its publication goes toward the support of the orphans. They are God's poor. Rev. Father Deppen is doing a great work for the orphans in editing and publishing their paper, and is also doing a grand educational work among the people by his writing. The Record each week contains many efforts from his pen. There is a thought in every line. It is a journal not to be lightly laid aside and is not worldly in any sense. It is well worth reading and re-reading. It is our hope that Rev. Father Deppen will be spared many years to continue his work in behalf of the orphans.

The Kentucky Irish American feels that its mission has not been altogether in vain after the kind words spoken in the Record.

LABOR DAY.

Last Monday was Labor's holiday and it was generally observed throughout the country, but nowhere more heartily nor with more reason than in this city. The parade was the largest, the appearance and behavior of the marchers the best, and the turnout of the public more universal than ever before. And in no year has organized labor such cause for rejoicing. During the past twelve months all labor organizations have grown, adding thousands of members, and several new unions were formed; the relations between labor and employers have become more harmonious, and most differences have been settled amicably and favorably to labor; strikes have been rare, when the many crafts and thousands of workmen involved are considered, the only serious disturbances being of the coal miners in the anthracite, West Virginia and Western Kentucky, hotbeds of trouble for years, and not to labor's discredit, but due to the enmity and obstinacy of the operators in denying just or even humane treatment of employees and resorting to oppression and brutality to enslave or drive out all honest labor. And even these are a source of hope, for the forbearance and good behavior of the strikers under the ordeal, compared with the haughty lawlessness of the operators, has attracted public attention, and the comparison is influencing public opinion and uniting employers, capitalists, the press and public officials with organized labor in protest and effort to right the wrongs of years' standing.

In this city organized labor is stronger and more harmonious than ever before; the feeling and opinion of employers have changed to more favor, as the real object, peaceful and lawful course of labor unions is revealed to them. In nearly all industrial establishments union labor is employed, at least in part, and nearly all closed down to allow their employees a holiday, those that are antagonistic and excluding union labor being the exception, well known and easily pointed out. With such results of conservative and peaceful policy and unity and harmony, Louisville labor unions had reason to heartily celebrate, and to hope for continued progress and gains in membership and added employers converted to unionism in the near future. The indisputable betterment of labor's condition will secure the first, the peace and prosperity of union establishments should open the eyes of non-union employers to the folly of their prejudices and bring them into the fold. Such orderly celebrations as that of Monday, calling public attention to the real objects and lawful methods of organized labor, especially in this city, tend to the attainment of this much desired result.

SOWING THE WIND.

The New York Journal publishes the pictures of Hon. Mark A. Hanna, J. Pierpont Morgan and President Roosevelt, underlined with these words in large type: "These three men could settle the anthracite strike if they sincerely wished to do so."

Hon. Marcus A. Hanna is United States Senator from Ohio, but has no authority to settle the strike, unless it be as Chairman of the Civic Federation, in which capacity he, as well as Archbishop Ireland and other members, has striven for weeks to induce the mine operators to accept the miners' proposition to arbitrate.

Mr. Morgan has not been shown to be connected with or have any control over the anthracite operators, but it seems that because he is the promoter and organizer of great industrial, commercial and transportation combinations, involving many millions of dollars, it is in his power to dictate to everybody and everything—a mere surmise with no real foundation.

President Roosevelt's powers are defined and limited by law, and he has no arbitrary powers. By what authority he could settle the strike, in no way directly affecting the Government or its business, is hard to even conjecture.

Similar publications frequently appear concerning other officials, even churchmen and wealthy men in other sections of the country.

When a prominent newspaper publishes such an assertion it should give some reason or ground for a basis; not only as a matter of justice to the men charged with so grave an offense—for offense it certainly is if true—but in the interest of law and order and the rights of the people. Sympathy for the strikers, disapproval of the course of the operators, who seem to be responsible for the prolongation of the strike and indifferent as to its consequences to the public welfare—all these do not justify such an assertion against three prominent men, one of them the chief officer of the Government.

Such publications cater to the prejudice and excite the passions of the ignorant and thoughtless against the rich and the Government; practically indorsing and disseminating the anarchistic idea that the rich and officials are all powerful, above and beyond the law, free to do as they please, regardless of right and justice, and use the powers of government to carry out their private ends and interests; they are masters, the people their slaves. Though generally uttered in the interest of labor, they are a positive injury to the working people, who are wrongly charged with holding and seeking to enforce such views, thus incurring the suspicion if not the ill-will of the American people, who, while sympathizing with labor, recognize and believe in protecting the just rights and good name of all, even the rich, and first and above everything else, love and uphold their Government and honor their public officials above partisanship and resent any imputations against them.

As thoughtful and conservative people pass such assertions by with contempt, their only effect is to sow the seed of anarchy among the ignorant and credulous who accept such statements as truth.

They are sowing the wind. We hope the American people will not reap the whirlwind.

A Catholic priest in Texas, who has become convinced that socialism is the panacea for all human ills and wrongs, notified his Bishop of his withdrawal from the priesthood and membership of the Catholic church, because the teachings of the church were at variance with his views. No attempt has been made at the sensational, but some of the non-Catholic papers seem to be surprised that the priest is allowed to do this without interference by the church authorities. As this is a free country there is no ground for civic interference, and as the Catholic church teaches "free will," he will not be bothered by the church authorities if he really withdraws and pursues his way, and does not, as is sometimes done in such cases, interfere with the church by insisting upon exercising his functions and forcing his teachings upon the church—thus falsifying its teachings and defying its authority within its fold. Until he interferes with the church the church will not interfere with him.

The Evening Post, in its Labor day greeting, attests its approval of organized labor by stating it was the first to sign the contract with the Typographical Union in this city and that it has always conducted its printing department according to union regulations. The Post might have truthfully added that in all those years there has never been the least friction or cause for complaint or a visit of union officers to its plant, except to sign a new contract on the expiration of the first five-year agreement. The cordial and prosperous relations of the Post and its employees for years is a most gratifying testimony of the beneficent results to employer and employee alike of the substitution of conference and arbitration for strikes and lockouts, of the recognition of mutual interests and rights in a spirit of fairness. The result has been mutual respect and confidence, harmonious co-operation of efforts, peace and progress.

Uncle Sam has made and is pushing a demand on Turkey for refund of the ransom paid, damages and the capture and punishment of those guilty of the abduction of Miss Stone, the American missionary. The "Sick Man" is resorting to his usual tactics for delay and evasion. The first reply was a general denial that the outrage was committed in Turkish territory, and therefore Turkey was not responsible. But Uncle Sam produced the evidence that it was in Turkish territory. Now Turkey pleads inability to arrest and punish the guilty because the captives when released left the country without giving information to guide the authorities in identifying, finding and arresting them. As the captives are living this will soon be furnished. Uncle Sam will make the "Sick Man" settle, as he did before, but the forms of diplomacy must be observed before ordering a man of war to a Turkish port.

The London Saturday Review, aggravated at the American attitude on international matters, American success and progress in trade and industries, and finally the recent declarations of President Roosevelt on the Monroe doctrine, all of which the Review says are hostile and detrimental to England and Europe, asserts that "a settlement by force is inevitable" between America and England. America puts its own construction on these questions and insists on that construction, which is neither understood nor accepted by Europe. Well, America seems not the least inclined to concede a whit to pleadings and argument any more now than ninety years ago. Then England attempted "a settlement by force," with the result that England and all the world accepted the American construction of the questions involved, even though not understood.

William Waldorf Astor, the degenerate and wealthy American who removed to England, foreswore his country to become a subject of Great Britain, and has since been trying by wealth or any other means to secure a title; has been snubbed by the King, is shunned by the nobility, and has become the butt of ridicule for the Thames fishermen. Mr. Astor recently purchased an estate on the Thames and posted it with notices forbidding all persons from fishing on his premises, a privilege which had never been denied by previous landholders. Recently the notice boards were covered with placards reading: "One million pounds sterling offered to any fisherman who can catch a title for the stranger living about here." And now the title hunter is being laughed at in all the London clubs.

The Times published a picture of James W. Dougherty, Chairman of the Labor day committee. The picture was a good one, though Jimmy was represented with a plumed chapecau and profusely bedecked with medals and badges. Jimmy Dougherty is well and favorably known, especially among the working people, who recognize and appreciate his earnest and active efforts in their behalf. Jimmy is a hustler and a comer, who will push to the front—the kind of young man the Times and others may want for a friend some day.

Some of the papers comment and assume to give the reason for Mayor Grainger's failure to appear in the Labor day parade. Mayor Grainger was invited and accepted some time previous, but left the city, and in his absence acting Mayor Weisinger participated. Notwithstanding the aspersions cast upon Mayor Grainger the workingmen fully understand the circumstances, and also the cause for the attacks—politics.

The circus which exhibited here this week got a scorching roast from some of the daily papers. If the charges were true the entire circus outfit should have been sent to the work-house; if not true the circus people have good grounds for libel suits.

Thanks to Providence President Roosevelt escaped serious injury.

DESERVED HONOR.

Congregation of the Propaganda Elevate Bishop Farley of New York.

Unanimous Choice as Successor to the Late Archbishop Corrigan.

Brief Sketch of an Able Churchman From His Birth Till the Present Time.

HIS PEOPLE ARE ALL PLEASED

The Catholics of the archdiocese of New York are rejoicing over the cable reports that Bishop Farley is to succeed to the Archiepiscopacy caused by the death of the late Archbishop Corrigan. The cable reports, which are believed authentic, say that the entire Congregation of the Propaganda has decided upon Bishop Farley's elevation. It now remains for Pope Leo XIII. to approve that recommendation. The official finding of the Propaganda is not expected to reach New York for a week or ten days.

John Murphy Farley was born in the County Armagh, Ireland, on August 20, 1842, and has consequently just passed his sixtieth birthday. He received a common school education in Ireland, but came to America when quite a youth and attended St. John's College, Fordham, from which institution he graduated in 1866. From that time until he was ordained a priest, in 1870, his theological training was received at St. Joseph's Seminary in Troy, N. Y. He was ordained in Rome and spent several years studying abroad. Later he returned to New York and was made pastor of St. Peter's parish, Staten Island. After a few years there he became secretary to the late Cardinal-Archbishop McCloskey, and in 1884 Pope Leo honored him with the title of Monsignor. Two years later he was made Missionary Director and Diocesan Adviser. In 1892 he was appointed Coadjutor Bishop of New York and Titular Bishop of Zengura.

Most Rev. Bishop Farley is a man of the people and is beloved of the people. His elevation gives satisfaction to all classes.

result was that many burdens were lifted. So things went on; every one was happier than ever before. Robert's courage began to rise, and, of course, his wife's rose with his.

Before long they heard mass would be said again, and Mrs. Robert "didn't see how they could go—no horse, and the last baby so little," etc.

As usual, Dorothy came to the rescue. "Father Boyd said it was sometimes more for the glory of God to stay away from mass than to go. I wasn't quite sure at the time just what he meant; but now I think I see. I am strong and neither young nor old. I went the last time he was here. You can leave the baby and four of the children with me. Then you and John Adrian and the two older ones can go in the wagon. Robert and Jean and Marie can walk. Then you can ride back with Robert, and the children can change places."

So it was settled, and off they went. It was a great treat to Mrs. Robert, if possible, more than to the children.

They had been gone about half an hour; the baby was asleep, and the other little ones were off somewhere at play, when there came a loud knock at the door.

Now, Dorothy Higgins was a brave woman, and never lost her head. She knew this was a strange time for anyone to be coming to her house, and she was alone. She also remembered John Adrian had been paid fifty dollars for a fine Jersey cow the day before, and the money was in the house.

"Now," she said to herself, "leave everything with Our Lord, Dorothy, and He will surely protect you, and His Mother will pray for you. O Mother Mary, never was it known that one asked your help in vain!"

The knock was repeated and Dorothy opened the door. A man who can be more easily described by saying he was an unmistakable tramp looked her full in the face and said:

"I should like some breakfast."

"No one ever leaves our door hungry," she answered. "I can give you coffee, bread and cold meat, and you are welcome."

Her gentle and fearless manner seemed to puzzle the man; but, like all tramps, he was hungry, and he ate her good things eagerly. When he had finished he looked at her and said:

"You are Miss Higgins and your brother is John Adrian Higgins. Yesterday he was paid fifty dollars, and I know where it is, for I followed him home and saw where he put it. It is locked up in his desk. If you will get the key I will help myself and go away. If not, I will fix you so you can move neither hand nor foot until the folks come home, and that will be an hour from now. I am armed, and I am not afraid to kill you or those little brats if they make an outcry or interfere."

Dorothy had heard of murderers and burglars, but she had never entered her mind that they could come into her life. She said to herself: "What this man says is true. We must lose our money; but no doubt, as he is a human being and Christ died for him, I must think of his burdens as if he were my brother."

This seemed quite plain to her pure and honest soul.

"Yes," she said; "I see exactly how it all is. I am not going to scream or faint or beg for your mercy. You are just a man with a soul that will be damned unless you change your life. Instead of being a robber, probably sometime a murderer, suppose you take my advice and become what your mother hoped you would be when you were a little boy. It would be expecting too much to ask you not to touch my brother's money—my brother's and mine, for we own everything together—but I will tell you what I will do. I will give or lend you the money, so you can not steal it. I think some day you will pay it back to us, if you can."

The astonished would-be thief looked at her with amazement; then quietly took the key, went to the desk, opened the drawer and put the money in his pocket.

He started to go out of the door, but turned back. Dorothy was still standing in front of the fireplace, no longer young, but with the finest kind of beauty, the beauty that shines out from a noble soul.

The man took off his hat, saying: "Madam, you are the first person in many years to give me a word of help and courage. I will not go back on you. I will, as you say, borrow half of this money, the rest I give back. If you do not see me or hear from me you may know I am either dead or so discouraged by not getting what I've gone to the bad again. But it's my last chance. It's heaven or hell."

In a moment he was gone, and poor Dorothy sat down and had a good cry all by herself. It was like a dreadful dream. Soon after, John Adrian came in happy and hungry.

"Sister," said he, "I just met the queerest-looking chap—looked like a very hard-up tramp, and yet he looked like something better. I hope he didn't bother you. You look as if something had happened."

Dorothy told him the whole story. "Well," he said, "it's all right, and you've had a great escape—very cheap at the price."

"John Adrian, I shall always believe that man will come back and pay us," And he did, but long, long after.

There came a letter one day, and a little parcel with a Japanese postmark. The letter contained a check for twenty-five dollars, and the parcel was a beautiful piece of carved ivory. The letter said: "I am not rich, but I pay my way, and I have married a good woman. Thanks for all due to God through Dorothy Higgins, at whose feet I lay this little offering. She understood the dreadful burden I carried, and without her I should never have laid it down. Thanks to God for all His mercies."

The new "Robert Emmet" is said by the New York papers to have scored the best hit known for years in the metropolis, drawing overflowing and enthusiastic audiences at every performance.

FRATERNITY.

Subject of an Able and Patriotic Address by Father Ahmann.

Quotes the Doctors of the Church on Love of Country.

Catholic Brotherhood Loves Liberty Guided by Eternal Truth.

TRIBUTE TO THE Y. M. I.

One of the delightful features of the recent Y. M. I. Grand Council meeting in Louisville was the address delivered at the banquet by Rev. Father Ignatius M. Ahmann, of Carrollton. He responded to the toast, "Fraternity."

He spoke as follows: Dear Brothers: Our worthy brothers have in the past few days so harmoniously attained your ear to eloquent music that I fear to become a discordant note by addressing you this evening, were it not for this splendidly united brotherhood about me, helping me to voice but the harmonious sentiments within you. It is with pleasure, then, that I speak of this noble brotherhood and outline some characteristics it should possess by referring you to its purest source and origin—family life. You know, my dear brothers, what a joy is felt in a home when there is an increase of the brotherhood in the family. The little ones after careful inspection kiss and caress the little brother and most zealously guard the right to nurse him. I gladly dispense you from your first obligation by giving you the kiss of peace and brotherly affection and extend to you a cordial fraternal greeting from your brothers of St. George's Council, 577. To nurse this big baby brother would be dangerous. I therefore exonerate you from the performance of that duty also. When the little boy was asked how much he loved his brother he stretched out his arms and in his juvenile simplicity said: "So much!" What a lesson it teaches our noble brotherhood. It is so natural that men must try and become unnatural not to possess this essential characteristic. It is the mirror of God in our souls, the echo of the eternal voice, the cement by which we must form our brotherhood firmly cemented into the eternal foundation. That this universal love is animating this Catholic brotherhood of the Young Men's Institute is evidenced by the grand inscription on their banner, "Pro Deo," and realized in the noble, virtuous lives as true and devoted sons of our Holy Mother the Church. God is not a separatist; He is a father and a unifier. So we of necessity must be united brothers, not separatists. The guiding star, Pro Deo, leading us on, what is there before us we are unable to accomplish? We are above all a Catholic brotherhood; therefore no jealous rivalry can be tolerated toward other Catholic organizations. We acknowledge that there are diverse ministries, but the same Lord and spirit. We wish to form a united phalanx for religion and virtue under the one triumphant banner of Jesus, and there is room enough for millions more. Whatsoever good the others have the Young Men's Institute uses it as an incentive to virtue, but more than this, he tries to excel all others in doing good and being a Y. M. I. Catholic par excellence. Can any other interpretation be given to its grand rule that only practical Catholics are admitted as members, giving all to God, church and country? Precisely because of its deep love for God must his love for his beautiful country be pure and inviolable.

Before I refer to this noble brotherhood from its patriotic standpoint, permit me to call your attention to another feature of true fraternity. I love to study childhood. Have you ever seen a little fellow deny his brotherhood? Have we not observed how they stood shoulder to shoulder for defense or even screamed for help when they found themselves powerless to vindicate violated brotherhood? Can you conceive anything more base than to be ashamed of a brother outside of the council chamber, or deny it in appearance only its identity of purpose? This is inexcusable, no matter how many so-called reasons may clamor in our defense. But true fraternity must be active, and it is our duty to help our brother socially, to positions of honor, for we have the assurance that they will fill them to the best interests of our country. The bluff game at present is frequently practiced. Weaker members are singled out by our opponents and the talented Catholic brothers, frequently bashful, are put aside. It is then our solemn duty to help and defend them, and such brotherly duty by stronger members fulfilled will nearly always be successful. Let me illustrate this by the old story of two brothers who landed in New York for the purpose of getting positions and working their way through life. Jim was bright but bashful, Patrick witty. Reading an advertisement for a teacher in one of the daily papers, Patrick sent Jim to the Superintendent. He was pleased to meet him. "Well," said he, under the usual exchange of courtesies, "I will give you a position provided you answer three questions."

"Jim, how many hairs are there on your head?" "About 3,333." "But how do you know it?" "Faith, if I don't believe count them myself." "A fair answer, indeed. How much does the moon weigh?" "Just a hundred pounds. There are four quarters in the moon; a quarter is twenty-five pounds; four times twenty-five is just a hundred pounds." "Still better," retorted the inquirer, but sure to get him with the third, he asked, smilingly, "and what am I thinking of at present?" "Ye think, sir, that ye have Jim before ye, but my name is Pat, and ye can't fool an Irishman nor bluff him."

Jim received the appointment. While we need not have the wit of the Irishman, to speak a good and encouraging word for our weaker brothers makes them strong and through our influence a recommendation may bring about most beneficent results. But what shall I say about the patriotism of this brotherhood? "Pro Patria," such is the proud inscription on the most beautiful banner of the world, each star of which is precious, each stripe inspiring, each thread holy. It rests securely in the hand of every Catholic, but it can be wrested from this brotherhood only with our corpses entwined in it—dead but not conquered in our love for this our great country. Mr. Prentice would have a most difficult task to stir up animosity with a patriotic brotherhood like ours to face him and a bloody Monday would nowadays be an impossibility. Our enemies must bow down in reverence before such noble purposes as ours. Perhaps you will be pleased to hear the teaching of the Catholic church on that point.

"The first duty of every Christian," says a great doctor, "refers to God, the second to his country, the third to his family, the fourth to all humanity. Do you seek happiness, magnanimity, honor? Well, then, I know of no greater happiness than that of a man who serves his country. There is no higher honor than that of him who, forgetting himself and family, gives his heart to his country." Who was this man who uttered such patriotic words? St. Ambrose, a Catholic Bishop, a saint and a doctor of our holy religion. Thomas Aquinas, the angelic doctor, is not less clear on that point: "Among all acts of fidelity which are demanded of us, I know of none more precious than the love of country. You must love God because He has given you life and sustenance, but you must also love your country, for if it did not exist to defend you you would cease to be what you are." On September 17, 1796, George Washington in his farewell address uttered the following memorable words:

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness—these foremost props of the duties of men and citizens." Our brotherhood rests on these great principles, because it is guided by our holy church teaching the religion divine and morality the most pure and are therefore, according to Washington's deposition, entitled to the tribute of patriotism, but if a Catholic, and our brotherhood in particular, is looked upon as disloyal to our country, Washington was the greatest traitor America has ever reared, for Catholics strictly adhere to his principles. Then an insult to a Catholic brotherhood is an insult to the father of our beloved country. In justice do we claim the tribute of patriotism and demand and defend it as our right. Our brotherhood loves fraternity of men, but so that it is not oblivious of a Father Almighty above it; it values and embraces all true progress in science, but it does not forget to kneel before and kiss the feet of the eternal wisdom, and therefore repels with indignation all so-called theories of progress which lower family and fatherland; it loves above all liberty, but a liberty which imposes great duties and responsibilities; and which is guided by a rule and this rule is eternal truth. This gives you the reason for my pride in this fraternity, because as it accepts only practical Christians it contains only good citizens and patriots. I love the young man, consequently I love the Young Men's Institute. My heart and soul are with you, your prosperity my greatest delight. Thanking you for your most cordial welcome extended to me in the beautiful city of Louisville, I pray God save, long live this noble brotherhood—the Young Men's Institute.

THE SICK CLERGY.

Rev. Patrick J. Kelleher, who has been seriously ill at St. Mary and Elizabeth Hospital, is somewhat improved, but is still far from being a well man. Rev. Father O'Connell, who has been ill of typhoid fever in his home at Bardonia, is improving, and it is thought the crisis has been passed.

Rev. Father Connolly, of St. Bridget's church, who is ill of typhoid fever at St. Anthony's Hospital, is also on the road to recovery.

ST. PATRICK'S ANNIVERSARY.

The anniversary of the consecration of St. Patrick's church will be solemnly celebrated on Sunday. A high mass will be sung at 10 o'clock and an appropriate sermon will be delivered.

BUCKINGHAM.

W. B. Watson's "American Burlesque Company" will hold the boards at the Buckingham theater for one week, beginning with the Sunday matinee. In addition to the many other novelties, a special feature of the show is the work of Seibini, known as the world's greatest trick bicyclist.

made a motion to depart the Superintendent consoled him and promised him another hearing the following morning. As the Superintendent believed in a long night's rest, and Pat, knowing this, uses this opportunity to introduce himself instead of Jim and as a good brother helped him out of the difficulty. "Good morning, Jim," said the Superintendent. "Good morning, sir." "Did you have a good night's rest?" "Yes, sir." "You are surely prepared, then, to answer my three questions?" "Yes, sir." "Well, Jim, how many hairs are there on your head?" "About 3,333." "But how do you know it?" "Faith, if I don't believe count them myself." "A fair answer, indeed. How much does the moon weigh?" "Just a hundred pounds. There are four quarters in the moon; a quarter is twenty-five pounds; four times twenty-five is just a hundred pounds." "Still better," retorted the inquirer, but sure to get him with the third, he asked, smilingly, "and what am I thinking of at present?" "Ye think, sir, that ye have Jim before ye, but my name is Pat, and ye can't fool an Irishman nor bluff him."

Jim received the appointment. While we need not have the wit of the Irishman, to speak a good and encouraging word for our weaker brothers makes them strong and through our influence a recommendation may bring about most beneficent results. But what shall I say about the patriotism of this brotherhood? "Pro Patria," such is the proud inscription on the most beautiful banner of the world, each star of which is precious, each stripe inspiring, each thread holy. It rests securely in the hand of every Catholic, but it can be wrested from this brotherhood only with our corpses entwined in it—dead but not conquered in our love for this our great country. Mr. Prentice would have a most difficult task to stir up animosity with a patriotic brotherhood like ours to face him and a bloody Monday would nowadays be an impossibility. Our enemies must bow down in reverence before such noble purposes as ours. Perhaps you will be pleased to hear the teaching of the Catholic church on that point.

"The first duty of every Christian," says a great doctor, "refers to God, the second to his country, the third to his family, the fourth to all humanity. Do you seek happiness, magnanimity, honor? Well, then, I know of no greater happiness than that of a man who serves his country. There is no higher honor than that of him who, forgetting himself and family, gives his heart to his country." Who was this man who uttered such patriotic words? St. Ambrose, a Catholic Bishop, a saint and a doctor of our holy religion. Thomas Aquinas, the angelic doctor, is not less clear on that point: "Among all acts of fidelity which are demanded of us, I know of none more precious than the love of country. You must love God because He has given you life and sustenance, but you must also love your country, for if it did not exist to defend you you would cease to be what you are." On September 17, 1796, George Washington in his farewell address uttered the following memorable words:

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness—these foremost props of the duties of men and citizens." Our brotherhood rests on these great principles, because it is guided by our holy church teaching the religion divine and morality the most pure and are therefore, according to Washington's deposition, entitled to the tribute of patriotism, but if a Catholic, and our brotherhood in particular, is looked upon as disloyal to our country, Washington was the greatest traitor America has ever reared, for Catholics strictly adhere to his principles. Then an insult to a Catholic brotherhood is an insult to the father of our beloved country. In justice do we claim the tribute of patriotism and demand and defend it as our right. Our brotherhood loves fraternity of men, but so that it is not oblivious of a Father Almighty above it; it values and embraces all true progress in science, but it does not forget to kneel before and kiss the feet of the eternal wisdom, and therefore repels with indignation all so-called theories of progress which lower family and fatherland; it loves above all liberty, but a liberty which imposes great duties and responsibilities; and which is guided by a rule and this rule is eternal truth. This gives you the reason for my pride in this fraternity, because as it accepts only practical Christians it contains only good citizens and patriots. I love the young man, consequently I love the Young Men's Institute. My heart and soul are with you, your prosperity my greatest delight. Thanking you for your most cordial welcome extended to me in the beautiful city of Louisville, I pray God save, long live this noble brotherhood—the Young Men's Institute.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

To clean pewter apply to the surface of the vessels a fine sand mixed with oil of tartar, then polish.

Salted almonds should be placed on the table at the beginning of the dinner and served with the crackers and cheese.

Imitation grass linen makes pretty summer curtains. An applied border of bright striped muslin adds to the effect.

When lamps are clogged with oil the burners should be boiled in a strong solution of soda and water and allowed to get thoroughly dry before being used again.

To clean britannia metal, moisten the articles to be cleaned with sweet oil, then apply a little pounded rotten stone, and polish with chamois leather and fine chalk.

Dates, figs and raisins, chopped together in a meat chopper and moistened with orange or lemon juice make an excellent filling for brown-bread sandwiches.

Chairs that look quite hopeless after a season on a porch respond to a stain as well as to enamel paint. An application of ammonia will help to remove any former "costs."

The best mode of removing grease from silks, hats, coats, etc. is to saturate a piece of clean flannel with benzine collas and rub gently, then expose to a good current of air.

A pinch of powdered ginger added to cranberries in cooking will bring out the flavor. They should not be stewed to a jam, but kept separate, looking more like candied berries.

Articles of food that are damp and juicy should never be left in ordinary paper. Paper is made of wood pulp, rags, glue, lime and similar substances, with acids and chemicals intermixed, and when damp is unfit to touch things that are to be eaten.

Cranberries make excellent timber for winter shortcakes. Pare, core and cook with as little water as will prevent burning. Sweeten as for table use and can. To use place between thin shortcake, cover with frosting and serve. You will call it delicious.

HIBERNIANS.

What They Have Been Doing
the Past Week—General
News Notes.

Organize a division at Frankfort.

Reports from Jeffersonville are that Division I is booming.
Division 1 meets Tuesday night and Division 4 Wednesday night.

Judge Shine has not once visited any of the Louisville divisions during his two years as State President.

Many divisions throughout the country are passing resolutions indorsing the United Irish League.

The New York State convention was held at Saratoga Springs, the first session taking place Tuesday.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Massachusetts held their State convention at Cambridge last Friday and Saturday.

Division 11 and the Ladies' Auxiliary of Providence observed Labor day by holding a very successful union picnic.

New Hampshire holds its State convention September 16. Resolutions indorsing the United Irish League will be adopted.

The three divisions of the Hibernians received holy communion in a body last Sunday morning at St. Joseph's church in Dayton, Ohio.

There is in the treasury of the New Jersey divisions a balance of $29,220. The Rev. William McLoughlin, of Union Hill, has been elected State Chaplain, to succeed Right Rev. Bishop McPaul.

The Pawtucket and Blackstone Valley divisions had a big union picnic at Valley Falls on Labor day. A parade of all the divisions took place in the morning and in the afternoon there were games and addresses.

Pennsylvania reported 319 divisions at the State convention held at Wilkesbarre. Patrick J. Donahue, of Philadelphia, was re-elected State President, as were the other officers who served faithfully for the past two years.

Covington and Newport can furnish more candidates for delegates to national conventions than any two cities in Kentucky. They never accomplish anything for their orders. Averdick and Shine belong to this class.

Division 2 is the latest surprise in Buffalo Hibernian circles. In two months it has doubled its membership. Nineteen members were obligated at the last meeting, and initiations will take place September 15 and 29, when the charter will close.

The biennial State convention of the Maine Hibernians will be held at Bangor on September 16 and 17, for which extensive preparations have been made by the local members of the order. The Ladies' Auxiliary convention will be held there at the same time.

There are 4,905 members in the insurance branch of the order in Minnesota, and the average age is thirty-six years. Fifty-four deaths occurred during the past two years, the beneficiaries receiving $54,000, with $33,000 balance in the treasury, $20,000 of which is invested in United States bonds.

From State Secretary Connolly's report it is shown that the order in Minnesota has increased 992 members since the last State convention, there being now more than sixty divisions in existence. The largest increase was in St. Paul, the membership of the various divisions in that city being practically doubled.

Bishop Montgomery delivered the address of welcome on behalf of the clergy at the California State convention of the order, held at Los Angeles, which was attended by nearly 200 delegates. Edward Tynan, of Los Angeles, was elected State President. Before the opening session the delegates marched to the Cathedral, where Rev. Father Murphy celebrated high mass.

Tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock the members of Division I of New Albany will observe their memorial day for deceased members by approaching holy communion in a body at Holy Trinity church. Their example might be followed by many other divisions with the most gratifying results. The election of County President occurs September 11. It is quite probable that Pat Kennedy will be again re-elected.

WHAT FACES SHOW.

We say that our thoughts are not known by our fellows; but that is not as true as we deem it when we say or think this to be the case. The tenor of our thoughts is being written in the expression of our faces day by day. Love, purity, communion with God in our inner selves, will give our faces a look that shows the direction of our desires and being. Selfishness, ill-nature, impure desire, unworthy motives, indulged in in secret, will steadily transform the finest lines of the face. We should be surprised if we knew how much we show of ourselves to our fellows in the daily walk of life. The only way of having a face that speaks well of the spirit's course is to have the spirit pursue a course that writes a good record on the face.

FOR CHARITY'S SAKE.

Another ice cream festival has been arranged for the benefit of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament at Washington and Buchanan streets. The festival will be held in St. Columba's Hall, adjoining the church, on the evening of September 25. This time Mesdames Rhody Minton and Joseph Kehl will be in charge of the arrangements. The popularity of these two ladies will insure the success of the entertainment. Rev. Father Daniel O'Sullivan, pastor of the congregation, has many faithful workers in his parish.

SENATOR M'NUTT HONORED.

The friends of State Senator H. S. McNutt will be pleased to learn that he has been elected President of the State Liquor League. The State meeting was held at Owensboro on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

IN MEMORIAM.

Tribute to Sister Cecilia, Who Died Last Sunday Morning.

The beautiful new convent of the Sisters of Mercy became for the first time a scene of sorrow and mourning on last Sunday morning, when the soul of Sister Mary Cecilia passed into the presence of God hallowed by every rite of the church and prayers of the assembled religious. The many friends and pupils of the Academy of Our Lady of Mercy will miss the familiar figure of this gentle nun. Ever smiling, sweet and affable, she won many friends and endeared herself alike by her loveliness of character to her community, friends in the outer world, and her numerous pupils at the academy, where she was Directress of Music for over twelve years.

Sister Mary Cecilia was born at Nashville, Tenn., and was known in the world as Jennie Callahan. At the early age of sixteen, when the world is fair to young and happy hearts, she turned aside from its smooth and flowery paths and chose a crucified Christ for her spouse and gave Him her pure young heart, with all its warm affection. Her life she gave for her fellow creatures, and in the ranks of the Sisters of Mercy she found ample exercise for the charity that impelled her in the springtime of her youth to leave all and follow Him that many souls besides herself might enjoy the inheritance of Christ.

Possessed of remarkable talent in music and devoted to its patronage, she received with the habit the name of Sister Mary Cecilia. She made her profession on the Feast of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel July 19, 1892, and from that date until illness overpowered her brave spirit two months ago her post as teacher was never vacant. Her numerous pupils can well recall the sweetness and patience which she manifested in teaching music, which is a laborious task even to the very courageous. A pupil's inaptitude for the art did not ruffle her serenity, and while learning the mysteries of the divine art from her one could at the same time gather in many lessons of virtue from her.

"She sought the Lord in all things," the reverend orator said in his funeral discourse. Ten years ago at her solemn profession she gave Him her heart, and her frail earthly tenement she used but for His honor and glory. She lived a long life in a short time, and when her director told her she was going home to her Father's house her only regret was that the Sisters would need and miss her so. "But God wants you," he replied. "Then His holy will be done," she said. After that time she had no more thought for the things of earth. Her body was racked by intense pain, but her constant prayer was for patience to endure all God might be pleased to send her.

On last Sunday morning at 8:30 o'clock, just as a fair young Sister knelt at the altar of God making her profession to begin in stern reality to do battle in the arena of life, another soul had finished hers and Sister Mary Cecilia stood before her God, her spouse Jesus Christ, with the works of her ten well spent years in her hands and truly then she could say, "Lord, I have sought Thee in all things, therefore do I expect my inheritance for all eternity."

Her funeral obsequies took place in the convent chapel and the Rev. P. M. J. Rock paid a beautiful tribute to her, and addressing her pupils, told them so to live that one day they might be reunited with this loved teacher in the choir of heaven.

The alumnae of the academy followed her remains in rank to their last resting place in St. Louis cemetery. There after a fervent exhortation the last prayers were offered for her, mingled with tears, and as the last words of the "Miserere" fell upon the breeze the earthly form of Sister Mary Cecilia was left to rest in God's holy keeping. L. A. F.

RECENT DEATHS.

Mrs. Mary Louisa Meyer, aged forty-four years, died at her home, 818 East Chestnut street, last Monday morning. She was the wife of J. B. Conrad Meyer and an active worker in St. Martin's church. The funeral took place from the family residence at 9 o'clock Thursday morning. The interment was in St. Louis cemetery.

Peter E. Murphy, a well known stock-raiser of Clark county, Ind., died at his home, eight miles west of Jeffersonville, at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. The deceased was thirty-eight years of age and was a son of Mr. Perry Murphy, an old time stock dealer of Louisville, who conducts a sale stable at Sixteenth and Main streets in this city. He has two other brothers, one residing in Wichita, Kan., and another in Augusta, Ga. Such was the news sent all the city papers this week, which was a cruel hoax. Mr. Murphy had been seriously ill, but was able to read the different obituary notices. His physicians predict his speedy return to perfect health.

SHORT HORIZONS.

It is a blessed secret, this of living day by day. Any one can carry his burden, however hard, for one day. Any one can live sweetly, patiently, lovingly and purely till the sun goes down. And this is all that life ever really means to us, just one little day. Do today's duty, fight today's temptations, and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to the things you can not see and could not understand if you saw them. God gives nights to shut down the curtain of darkness on our little days. We can not see beyond. Short horizons make life easier and give us one of the blessed secrets of brave, true, holy living.

"Old Limerick Town," the new play written for Chauncey Olcott, the popular Irish comedian, contains some of the most beautiful and picturesque scenes ever seen on the American stage. The company presenting this fine play began its season this week at St. Paul.

IRELAND.

Record of the Most Important of the Recent Events Culled
From Exchanges.

The sudden death is announced of Patrick Crumpey, T. C., Derry.

Alderman Patrick Dowd, Labor candidate, was last Monday elected Lord Mayor of Dublin, defeating Timothy Harrington, candidate for a third term.

The County Council of the South Riding of Tipperary at their recent meeting passed a resolution recording their opinion that the Cork Exhibition was worthy of the support of all Irishmen.

At the last meeting of the Kerry County Council a resolution was adopted in hearty support of the Cork Exposition. It was also decided that the Council should visit the great Exposition in a body.

The weekly meeting of the Executive of the Cork Exposition was held on Thursday, when the Lord Mayor made a speech declaring that the undertaking had so far proven a great success. He was confident as to the future.

The tourist rush of returning Americans at present and for some time past is exceeding all past records. Numbers of saloon passengers are unable to find berths on outgoing liners for nearly a month via Queenstown and Liverpool.

At the meeting of the Cork United Trades Association, Thursday the proposed site for the free library was under discussion and the meeting was unanimously of opinion that the suggested site—the Angles buildings—was unsuitable for the purpose.

At the improvement department of the Cork corporation recently the City High Sheriff, A. Roche, T. C., handed in a notice of motion for the next meeting of Council, proposing to confer the freedom of the city on Cardinal Moran, Archbishop of Sidney.

The annual convention of the Irish Land and Labor Association was held on Friday week in the vestibule of the municipal buildings, which was specially arranged for the occasion. D. D. Sheehan, M. P., presided, and some important matters were discussed.

The Earl of Dudley arrived at Dublin on last Saturday and was sworn in as Lord Lieutenant. The Council chamber of Dublin Castle was thronged with a brilliant assembly. Lord Dudley is not expected to make his state entry into Dublin until the end of September or early in October.

Col. Kirkwood, the Local Government Board Inspector, opened an inquiry at 11 o'clock on Tuesday in the board room of the Cork Workhouse into the circumstances connected with the supply of meat to the Cork Workhouse, and particularly those under which portion of a cow's head was found in the boiled mutton, on Tuesday, July 1 last. The evidence given was of an interesting character.

The election of a Parliamentary representative to fill the vacancy in South Belfast caused by the death of W. Johnson, of Ballykilbeg, Conservative, took place on Monday. The candidates were Charles W. Dunbar Buller, Unionist, and Thomas Sloan, nominee of the Protestant Association. There were many exciting scenes throughout the day. The result was declared at night as follows: Sloan, 3,795; Buller, 2,969.

The death occurred at Youghal Monday of the Rev. Canon Harley, rector of Christ church, Cork. The deceased clergyman had been ill for several months past and had gone to Youghal for the benefit of his health. He was aged sixty-six, and had been ordained in the year 1861. He was the son of the late Canon John Harley, of the Diocese of Fermus, and brother of Dr. Harley, Dublin. He had been connected with Christ church for the last twenty-four years.

At the Cork police office on Tuesday John Nolan, 4 Abbey street, an employee of Crosse & Blackwell, summoned Patrick Donovan, Crowley's lane; James Fitzgerald, Bandon road, and Michael Foley, High street, three former employees of the firm, for assault and beating on August 13 last. The Bench considered the case proved and fined each of the defendants 40s and costs, or in default of one month's imprisonment, and in addition they were ordered to enter into bail, themselves in £10 and two sureties of £5, to keep the peace for six months, or in default to go to jail for one month.

The announcement that the strike of the employees in the firm of Lunham Brothers, Kemp street, Cork, has terminated will be generally received with the utmost satisfaction. The misunderstandings between the heads of the firm and the employees, which so long ago resulted in the cessation of work, have now been dissipated, and though the terms of the settlement have not been made known, it is sufficient to state that they are agreeable to both parties. During the past five months in which the strike held out not only did this important firm suffer considerably, but the fifty odd men who went out also naturally felt keenly their position. Negotiations between the firm and the representatives of the strikers have been proceeding for some time, and on Monday the agreement was come to by which the firm took back on Tuesday morning thirty of the employees. The remainder, who number more than twenty, will probably resume work without any prolonged delay.

AVENUE THEATER.

"The Scout's Revenge," the Avenue's next attraction, has been received with favor everywhere. It is presented by a competent cast of actors and tells a pretty story of love and hatred. There is a vein of humor running through the play which is consistently introduced, and not the least feature will be the special scenery. This melodrama is much better than the two presented since the opening.
